Chapter 1 by _Gray

On called a blessing upon us now tortured me as i slowly regain consciousness. Its blistering ray continuously torched my skin until it forced me to come out of my slumber completely.

My nostrils were walking upon unfamiliar grounds, it felt as though i was suffocating, until i opened my eyes. I was an alien. The ground was covered with very small trees that stood waist high. My feet were planted on grass, the only thing that was familiar to my eyes so far.

My attention was taken away from what was transpiring out side of my head for a slight moment, and my thoughts took full control interrogating my memories, or what remain of it.

"How did i get here and why was the back of my head hurting and feeling as though it was swollen?"

Unfortunately, my memories were on a lunch break or it had retire after its days work. What ever it was on or in, it made it futile to get answers for the questions my thoughts asked.

I did the next brilliant thing i could have done. walk.

But where do i go from here, there were there any living creatures storing. No hills, no mountains, just a flat surface covered with dwarfs like trees. Reality is lost!
